Summer Review: Francoise Gilot, Kaupelis to Mydans

With the summer winding down, collectors have been actively taking interest in the retro focus going on in American culture.

Always looking for compelling offerings, GALLERY M arranged for a unique private collection showing of Francoise Gilot's paintings. Francoise Gilot is known for her own talent created while living to Pablo Picasso and later married to Dr. Jonas Salk. Although Picasso had differing opinions of her talent, Gilot works capture the "retro" 50's, 60's and 70's art styles. Her collages, drawings and oils join abstract and realist movements of the time. Gilot's available works are in the gallery through September 31 and online.

One artist who has stayed true to his period at GALLERY M is painter Robert Kaupelis. Kaupelis is known for his bright, vibrant abstract departures. His process has

The New Site: www.gallerym.com

GALLERY M is now "new and improved." With many compliments and suggestions from our online collectors worldwide, we have launched our 2.0 web site.

Key to the new site is easier navigation, updated news stories, fast RSVP for events and shows, and MY COLLECTION—a personalized portfolio for collectors and visitors to track, share and collect works from our artists. By registering, you can have a GALLERY M consultant work with you on your current collecting objectives; our consultants can even post works specific to your needs that otherwise might not be available to the general public.  technique that is refined abstractly speaking. Collectors at GALLERY M enjoy his paintings because they carry each on a journey—a departure from the everyday. No two people have the same experience with a Kaupelis work – a process Kaupelis takes pride in. Today he is finding new ways to incorporate his mix of colors with technology – his sketches can now be compu-prints which act as the basis for new original works on canvas.

Both Gilot and Kaupelis offer smaller works or more statement oriented works.

Filters of the 20th Century: Bourke-White & Mydans

Vintage Margaret Bourke-White photographs, like “Female Workers Welding”, are now available at GALLERY M.

As The Art Quarterly reported in it's last edition, LIFE Magazine will return this fall to newsstands as a weekend magazine in national papers. The new look will expand on it historic presence in Americana and then some. Since 1996, GALLERY M has been one of only a handful of international fine art galleries to represent the full LIFE archives as gelatin silver and platinum prints. In preparation for our October 8 selling exhibit, “Filters of the 20th Century”, GALLERY M has received a group of works from the VINTAGE LIFE Photography collection. We invite you to view and collect Vintage Margaret Bourke-White photographs along with a similar group from FSA photographer Carl Mydans. Institutions like the Library of Congress, Major International Museums and the International Center of Photography have included similar vintage photographs in their collection already.

What makes a LIFE vintage photograph different from a modern print? While a few factors exist, the photograph could have been part of the magazine's production. Typically this image has unique markings that the photographer, editors or archivist affixed while reviewing the image. GALLERY M is proud to offer Bourke-White and Mydans vintage photographs that are in excellent condition and backed with proper LIFE documentation.

New Artist Program

Often times collectors mention a new artist to our consultants, gallery director or partners. With GALLERY M in the top 15% of visited websites worldwide*, we wanted to broaden our ability to work with other talented artists, photographers and sculptors for our collectors. Through this newsletter and targeted displays and links throughout our site, emerging artists can promote their latest works on our web site to interested collectors. Artists can use this service to promote their own site or in place of the technology hassles that the internet poses to most artists today.

Certain artists, photographers and sculptors may qualify for a full section alongside our established group of contemporary artists, photographers and sculptors. Our artist service is affordable with monthly plans available. If you are an artist or know of someone whose talent is exceptional, please have them visit our artist section at <http://www.gallerym.com/artists.cfm> or <http://www.artquarterly.com> and click on services.

* GALLERY M's Alexa ranking is 470,664 as of 9/3/2004. Visit Alexa for details.
